P.J. focuses his practice on corporate and commercial litigation, bringing a fresh and flexible approach to help solve various issues that arise during the life of a case. His passion for zealous advocacy makes him a valuable asset when confronted with a challenging legal landscape. He enjoys working on a team, applying his skill set where necessary in order to achieve a positive result.

P.J. graduated from the University of Maryland Francis King Carey School of Law in 2018, where he served as a Notes and Comments Editor for the Maryland Law Review. While in law school, P.J. honed his litigation and advocacy skills, successfully competing in Alternative Dispute Resolution and Moot Court competitions. These efforts culminated in a best brief award and overall championship in the 2017 National Moot Court Competition for his region. P.J. earned his B.A. in Political Science from the University of Delaware in 2015, while spending his summer breaks working for his local District Attorney's Office.
