Shira focuses her practice on corporate matters before the Delaware Court of Chancery.

She brings to Young Conaway unique perspectives from both inside and outside the courtroom, informed by her experiences prior to joining the firm. During law school, Shira externed for Magistrate in Chancery Selena E. Molina of the Delaware Court of Chancery, and then for Kent County Resident Judge Jeffrey J Clark of the Superior Court of Delaware. She also maintained active involvement in extracurricular activities, including her position as Internal Managing Editor for the Delaware Journal of Corporate Law, the organization and penmanship of an intrascholastic moot court competition, and engagement as the Domestic Violence Research and Advocacy Fellow for the Family Health Law and Policy Institute of Delaware Law School, a fellowship she held for two consecutive years. Juggling a multitude of responsibilities at once is now second nature to Shira, who thrives in fast-paced environments riddled with complexities.
